

IMPACT OF BREXIT ON MOBILE ROAMING

GIBRALTAR REGULATORY AUTHORITY

The EU roaming arrangements have been very popular with customers.

What happens after the transition period will depend on what is agreed about the UK's future economic relationship with the EU. If nothing is agreed then mobile operators would be able to implement roaming charges after the end of the transition period.

If mobile operators continue to provide Roam Like At Home offers, then there would be no immediate change in users' experience of using their mobile phone services.
